Observações:

1) Lack of documentation, namely homologated exams. Considering the country of origin, delivered documentation lacks the final examination of foreign high school education equivalent to Portuguese high school education which must be duly certified and conducted at a national level or nationally recognised.

2) Lack of documentation, namely one of the required entrance examination, and the language proficiency certificate of the language in which the study programme is taught: English level equal to or greater than the so-called B2 level in the Common European Framework of Reference for Languages (CEFR), certificate by a competent authority in language knowledge.
